New Course: Built in Quality

Most lean thinking books and training focus on topics related to the Just in Time, or JIT, pillar of the "Lean House." To be sure, topics such as takt time and kanban get lots of attention.

But as we all know it takes two pillars to hold any house up. And as it relates to the "Lean House" the second, less talked about, pillar focuses on Built in Quality with a special emphasis on topics like Jidoka.

In this course focused on Built in Quality (BIQ) Chris Schrandt - a senior consultant for the Kaizen Institute and former Quality Engineering Manager at the Toyota Georgetown, KY plant - delivers a live workshop at the Peterbilt Manufacturing Facility.

During this course Chris explains what Built in Quality is, how to achieve it, and how to ensure it becomes a way of life within your organization no matter if you work in a factory, office, or healthcare facility.
